Russians Set Stage in Space For Dramatic 'Lab' Boarding

Three cosmonauts in in ed. Russia's unmanned space station in earth-orbit today, setting the stage for a dramatic linkup and possibly a boarding that could set the pace for a second decade of Soviet space exploration.

Tass news agency said the three-man crew of Soyuz 10. launched early today, Moscow time, would carry out "joint experiments" with the space station Salyut — Salute — sent into orbit Monday.

The space station is believed to be one of the biggest space vehicles ever put into orbit and has completed more than 60 orbits of the earth.

The three men aboard

The three men aboard Soyuz 10 are Col. Vladimir Shatalov, flight engineer Alexei Yeliseyev — who both have been in space twice before—and test engineer Nikolai Rukavishnikov.

The cosmonauts eased their Soyuz 10 into a parallel orbit with Salyut and zeroed in for a rendezvous. Soyuz 10 was in an orbit slightly higher than that of Salyut, but their angles of inclination to the equator were exactly the same, 51.6 degrees. This means that degrees. This means that Soyuz 10 would only have to slow down a bit to drop into the same orbit as Salyut.

Tass made no mention of an attempt to link the two ence to joint experiments, but Soviet scientists have said they want to see the introduc-

Tass said the Soyuz 10 cosmonauts already had started their flight program but did not spell out what they were doing.

The agency said the pro-gram also included a series of tests to study the influence of space flight on human beings.

So far, no details of the station have been published, and its size and weight are a matter of guesswork.

Tass said telemetric and

Stanfield Sees Oil Plan Gaps

By DON VIPOND

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield said in Victoria today he sees two major gaps in development of American plans to ship oil out of Alaska.

There is a lack of research on water accidents. What swould happen if the giant tankers which may be used down B.C.'s coast were in-volved in collisions or sprung leaks?

And there is an information gap, certainly as far as Canadisms are concerned, on just what volume of tanker traffic is proposed.

NO ANSWERS Stanfield said he tried with out success to get some answers on the volume of traffic on the three-day visit to Alaska he has just com-

The Canadian government has a clear responsibility to follow the matter more closely, he said.

"There seems to be a great deal of unanswered questions about the tankers."

Stanfield, in Victoria while on a tact-finding tour of the west coast on the oil issue, made the comments this morning while exchanging views with eight environment specialists, called together at his request by Environment 100

MET BENNETT

Earlier in the moming he met with Premier Bennett for 25 m in u te s. Leaving the premier's office, he said it had been a pleasant meeting in which a number of questions were discussed.

"We're all considerably concerned" a bout environment threats, he said.

Asked if other matters were discussed, he said there naturally would be when two politicians originally from the East coast got together.

Other topics touched on with the premier included "the country, the economy and the constitution," said Stanfield "and we agreed there were some problems around."

CANADA NOT READY TO SEEK IJC ACTION

OTTAWA (CP) — The government had no plans at present to refer to the international Joint Commission the question of possible pollution dangers along the British Columbia coast from oil tanker traffic. Energy Minister J. J. Greene said today in the Commons.

Greene added, however, that he does not know what action might follow a meeting May 3 between senior U.S. and Canadian government officials in Washington.

Juan de Fuca Route Opposed

Premier Bennett said today if the United States insists on shipping Alaskan oil down the B.C. coast the tankers should stay out of the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

He said that the route should be kept "well out to sea" and the oil delivered to a more southerly point, such as California.

It could then be shipped from there to the refinery in Puget Sound — if necessary — by Bennett made his comments following a meeting with a federal Conservative leader Robert Stanfield who has just returned from Alaska.

The premier said the U.S. should stay out of waters close to the B.C. coast if it decides "in its wisdom" that it can't allow a pipeline through Canada to transport its own oil.

Bennett said he was "alarmed" about the prospect of huge oil tankers off the coast of B.C. and added that "we are vitally interested in protecting our environment."

He said B.C. would likely be involved "at the specialist" level in any Canada-U.S. talks about the proposed oil route.

Bennett said he and Stanfield had "a meeting of minds" on the question of protecting the environment of the west coast.

At issue is the construction of a pipeline across Alaska from the site of the huge North Slope oil reserves on the Arctic Ocean to the Port of Valdez on the Gulf of Alaska — a distance of 800 miles.

The oil would then be transported from Valdez by tanker to the Cherry Point refinery in Puget Sound.

At present the construction of the pipeline has been stalled by the U.S. department of the interior following an outcry by conservationists about the ecological effects of the scheme.

Canada has proposed an alternative pipeline route down the Mackenzie Valley, which would avert the danger of oil spills from wrecked tankers.

Quebecers Win Key Tactic Vote

OTTAWA (CP) - The New Democratic Party leadership convention picked up steam today, featuring some last-minute tactical jockeying on the thorny Quebec question and the first formal voting test for the left-wing Waffle faction.

But despite his personal popularity, it was not a highly emotional occasion as Douglas came to say goodbye. His successor will be elected at the current NDP convention Saturday.

The tribute was carried out in a gay, entertainment-filled 30 minutes in which speeches were kept to a minimum.

The presentation was simple, a color television set. In paying tribute to the retiring leader, author Pierre Berton said he doubted whether the party could have survived without Douglas.

"If he hadn't been born he would have been invented."
Paying tribute to the 17 years Douglas spent as premier of Saskatchewan, Berton said he pioneered programs that were to be followed by other less adven-

Grant Notley of Edmonton said Douglas was a man ahead of his time. As premier of Saskatchewan, he led a government that lived for the people "while most governments lived off the people."

TRIBUTE TO DOUGLAS FROM OLD ENEMIES

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker, never known for his affinity to socialism or socialists, advocated Thursday that retiring New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas be made a member of the Privy Council, reserved generally for the politically venerable.

Diefenbaker outstripped speakers from the other three parties in the Commons in paying tribute to the 66-year-old Douglas, who will retain his seat in the Commons.

At the behest of Government House Leader Allan MacEachen, the House agreed not to sit Thursday evening while a party was being held for Douglas.

Diefenbaker said he had often disagreed very strongly with Douglas, but he admired him as "an outstanding debater . . . a great crusader" and a man with a sense of humor. Douglas had been premier of Saskatchewan between 1944 and 1961, and in 1967 provincial premiers had been made members of the Privy Council, Diefenbaker said.

MacEeachen said Douglas had earned "a special place" in the history of Parliament.

While NDP members feted him, he said, Liberal members

... MISSING INFANT

Victoria said this morning the escapades of baby Duncan came to an end around 9 this morning when the hovercraft crew from Vancouver radioed they had him safe and sound.

The drama began Thursday afternoon when Pat Duncan noticed that her infant son had, so to speak, split the scene.

The parents of the child recruited friends and neighbors who live in the area on the northern tip of Galiano, about 20 miles southeast of Nanaimo.

The search on the land went on all night long and, as operations proved fruitless and worries mounted, it was decided to alert the search and rescue men.

"A citizen" telephoned Victoria to report the incident and a Labrador helicopter was dispatched from Comox

It was soon joined by the Coast Guard cutter Racer, a Coast Guard hovercraft from Vancouver and an RCMP motor launch from Ganges on Salt Spring Island.

The child was located and picked up after about two hours of shoreling search. He was found in the Diomisio Point srea on Porlier Pass and taken to Chemainus for a medical check-up.

At 10:30 s.m. this morning he was reported re-united with mum and dad aboard the hovercraft and headed for home in Coon Bay.

Aldermen Say Ban Just Not Cricket

Cricket spectators will lose their special provilege of watching the game in Beacon Hill Park from the comfort of their automobiles after July 14.

Victoria council Thursday ordered changes in the isaffic bylaw which at present allows only cricket spectators to park their cars in the park. Spectators of other sports events had no such privilege.

The move was requested by the parks department as part of an effort to cut back on traffic movement and use of cars in Beacon Hill Parks.

Aldermen Percy Frampton, Tom Christie and Robert Baird tried to retain the privilege but were outvoted.

Baird called the cricket matches, complete with spectators in cars, "part of the Victoria scene." Christie and Frampton said it was a privilege based on many years of practice, and shouldn't be altered.

Parks chairman Clyde Savage said the move was not made with "any thought of barring people from watching cricket.." The ban is being instituted "simply so its fair to everyone who uses the park."

The July 15 date for implementation of the change will allow parking on the field during a cricket tournament already planned for July 4 to 10.

Despite international laws designed to prevent, or at least reduce oil pollution from spillages at sea, the pollution not only continues but is increasing.

In the three years ending in April 1967, more than 250 accidents involving tankers occurred at sea. This, according to the Liverpool Underwriters as Association who should know. They underwrite insurance for tankers.

But not all oil pollution at sea results from tanker accidents. Other ships contribute more than three-millions tons amually cleaning tanks or Britain, a frequent victim of oil spillages, recently was reported to have taken the unprecedented step of ordering unprecedented step of ordering the sinking of any ship which threatened to pollute her shores. In the four years since the disurance underwriters released their figures the situation has not improved. This year more than a billion tons of crude oil and petroleum products will travel the sea lanes.

With tankers on the drawing boards twice as big as any now at sea and with new oil fields ready and waiting to make their contribution to world oil trade, there's little room for optimism. The number of spillages is destined to go up as will the amount of oil spilled.

waste oil persists a long time at sea. It can float on water for at least 18 months and travel immense distances, all the while retaining its death-dealing capacity.

The long-term effects of continued and accumulating oil spills on marine ecology is still largely a matter for speculation. Not so its effect on sea birds. Their rotting, oil-soaked carcasses, lining polluted beaches by the thousands are mute evidence of at least one tragic aspect of the problem.

As far back as 1937, evidence was being gathered which showed how devastating even a relatively small oil spill could be marticularly as a firm of the sea, often in immense concentrations. Auks, murres, guillenots.

RIVES JUNCTION, Mich. (UPI) — Mrs. Leonard Spooner is hopping mad because one of the billboards on her family's farm was felled by the midnight skulkers who have been chopping down roadside signs lately in Southern Michigan.

"I wish I had a man-eating dog or a bull to let loose," she said. "I need that sign in the summer to shade the cows."

Facts Prevail

minister and later president of the Exchequer Court of Canada, Mr. Joseph Thorson, is making an impassioned plea to Englishspeaking Canadians to hold the line against threatened inroads of the French language in this country. And coupled with this objection to bilingualism is a protest against political equality for the two races. "The French Canadians are not entitled to the equality claimed by their leaders as a matter of law or constitutional right," says Mr. Thorson. It was the theme of his address to a Victoria audience Wednesday night.

Mr. Thorson no doubt reflects the sentiments of a large number of non French-speaking Canadians today. But while he may marshal legal and even historic arguments in support of his stand, he appears to overlook the obvious fact: French Canada is there. And the solution to such problems as may arise from that fact does not lie in quoting constitutional or legislative support for arguments against it. The solution must be found in recognition of the French presence and efforts to devise means by which the two races may live in harmony and mutual benefit. If the alternative is to break up Canada into two alienated portions, there can be no hesitation in deciding what we should do.

Much of the current problem lies in the fact that Canada today is in the throes of change in this regard. What appears to some observers to be a gross invasion of Anglo-Canadian rights and interests will no doubt be taken as a natural accompaniment of Canadian nationhood in the years to come.

There are, of course, adjustments to make, and safeguards to recognize. There-should be full protection for federal" employees who do not wish to, or cannot, been eased.

A FORMER LIBERAL CABINET acquire a sufficient knowledge of French to use it in their work. There should not be a blanket requirement for proficiency in both languages among federal employees in all parts of Canada.

It is not necessary that a postal clerk in Victoria, for instance, should have to know a language of which he might not use a single word in a year's service to the public. And similarly, in isolated areas of Quebec, proficiency in English should not be a requirement for federal employees. But that is not to say that Canadians everywhere would not be enriched by knowing two, or more, languages, and it is not likely that Mr. Thorson would deny this.

The aging Canadian, who has rendered good service to his country over many years, seeks a united nation and he sees bilingualism and biculturalism as threats to this. But his concept is a generation or two old. The Canada of 1920 or even of 1940 is not here and will never return. We must face the fact, rather than the theory, and the fact that a third of the nation is calling for greater participation in the country as a racial component. There are straw men and excesses in the demands on both sides; six million people cannot by any mathematics be politically "equal" to 16 million; on the other hand French-speaking Canadians are hardly plotting to kidnap Canada.

There will be adjustments, naturally. What country in the world is not making adjustments today? But the chief threat to Canada's long-range survival as a sovereign nation is not internal: it comes from the friendly giant who our neighbor to the south. Quebec's contribution to our nationhood could be a powerful factor in combating that threat, once the inner turmoil of rapid transition has

In the NDP, a Push Back Into Socialism

TEN years after its founding conven-I tion, the New Democratic Party is back in the national capital to choose its how the mood has changed over the decade. In 1961 the CCF had reached the low point of its fortunes. It was down to eight seats in the House of Commons (nine including Walter Pitman who had been elected as a "new Party" Candi-surviving provincial base.

Of the five present candidates for the succession only one — the young and articulate Frank Howard of Skeena was a member of the Canadian Parliament. The trouble was that a politicial theory, almost an article of faith with many socialists, had been proved wrong. According to this there was room in public life for a party of the right and a party of the left; the Conservatives, as a complicating factor, were supposed to disappear. Instead, they had swept a Liberal government from power and decimated the CCF

In the wake of the disaster, there had been a great deal of heart-searching at all levels of the party, one of the conclusions drawn by many, although not all, of the top figures was that the CCF—despite a retreat at Winnipeg from the old Regina principles—was still too doctrinaire and sectarian to compete successfully with older, more national, parties. In particular it appeared that socialist prescriptions had little appeal for the great trade unions, the most obvious source of renewed support for a radical party, and none in Quebec, which had steadily barred and bolted its doors to the CCF appeared confirmation of the view that a "new party," uncommitted to socialism, would fare well in the country. Thus the preparatory literature for a founding conference intended to cast a wide net was notable for the manner in which socialism was played down in favor of vaguely reassuring terms such as "democratic control."

Much more vigorous language was heard at the convention from delegates, many of them trade unionists, concerned with the practical problems of winning political power. There were outright attacks on socialism and embittered protests from CCF veterans who felt a sense of betrayal.

In the intervening period, the mo has changed rather dramatically. The emphasis is again on democratic socialism, which seems to be interpreted more and more in neo-Shavian terms; that is to say on equalization of incomes. But although the change has produced a new wave of ideologists, especially waffle faction, it did not originate in any new search of the socialist scriptures. It appears to be primarily a response to the upsurge of Canadian nationalism which has been reflected in all parties in

Fighting U.S. Capital

This is most obvious in the case of the waffle. It was born of the Watkins manifesto which followed rather swiftly on the report of the Watkins task force on foreign ownership. In effect it was the argument of the manifesto that the Watkins recommendations would not be enough to save us unless the state moved in with a sweeping program of public ownership. But it was not the eradication of capital in general that inspired the

Mr. Pitman's success in Peter- a party; it was the eradication of borough, normally a Conservative seat, American capital, seen as a threat to our national-state

Another influence obviously has been the "war on poverty" studies. The guaranteed annual income is more popular with New Democrats (although there are a few critics, such as Max Saltsman) than with members of any other political group.

Quality of Life

Some are suggesting, however, that this would be no more than a good beginning. To quote the first background paper, which is not, of course, party policy but an interesting indicator: "The real meaning of poverty today is not merely a question of absolute income; it is primarily a question of absolute income; it is primarily a question of exploitation and inequality... The real dimension includes, more importantly, satisfaction, self-determination and the quality of life which differentiates the affluent classes from the prop." from the poor."

Thus there now seems to be a good deal more denunciation of capitalism by New Democrats than we have heard in a long time. With this goes more talk of "socialism," although some still prefer "social democracy," and there is a stronger tendency than in the past to equate this with greater equality of incomes. In addition there has been much more advocacy recently of "worker participation in control of industries and businesses" although it may be doubted that this has advanced very far beyond platform rhetoric.

There is another big difference between 1961 and 1971. Quebec, in the meantime, had experienced the so-called quiet revolution and other noisier developments. This has not directly helped the NDP. But other movements have imported a language of radicalism into the province which once would have been considered unacceptable.

There is a strong enough socialist wing in the Parti Quebecois to make it, in the view of moderates, embarrass-ingly attractive to the radical section of New Democrats. While few of the leaders seem particularly hopeful of Quebec, the notion of 1961 — that the province was repelled by the party's socialist image — no longer seems to be an important consideration.

The general assumption is that the waffle will be defeated at the convention, partly because it has played what many regard as a disruptive role in the party but mainly because its obsession with "buying back Canada" would, as a practical matter, rule out the social objectives of the party. This "where is the money" argument has been put most trenchantly by Frank Howard.

Later Choices

In any convention, however, second, third and fourth choices are important to the rival candidates. The waffle repre sents a substantial bloc of votes uncertain destination once Mr. Laxer is eliminated. His opponents accordingly have been doing some judicious suff-trimming and may be expected to do more; with the exception, probably, of Mr. Howard, who has been too honestly outspoken to have many hopes in that

Thus the times and fraction politics seem to be working in the same direction. While popular assemblies are notoriously unpredictable, the NDP appears to be moving toward the reoccupation of old socialist positions abandoned by the CCF in the '50s or by its-successor at the founding convention of 1961. Nationalism has tended strongly to push the party back to socialism after a detour of a decade. How far it has moved will doubtless become apparent

Bengal's Agony: We Never Learn

NEW STATESMAN

If blood is the price of a people's right to independence, Bangla Desh has overpaid.

Of all the recent struggles to bring down governments and change frontiers in the name of national freedom the war in East Bengal may prove the bloodiest and briefest. On this level alone, the East Pakistanis have achieved a record of suffering.

But even if their movement is destroyed within a few days or weeks, it may only be a temporary defeat in a war of liberation which will eventually be recognised as

In all such cases, establishment opinion is heavily weighted in favour of the status quo. The chances of any world power declaring support for Bangla Desh are minimal. The Bengalis' case for statehood may be hard to refute, but it is inconvenient to everyone else.

And yet, by an unusual combination of circumstances, And yet, by an unusual combination of circumstances.

And yet, by an unusual combination of circumstances, Bangla Desh has managed to obey all the rules. So this may be the moment to consider what we, and other countries, mean by those splendid words which recur like a chorus in the United Nations charter: 'the right to selfdetermination of peoples.'

Objectively or subjectively, in Chinese or English, in capitalist or socialist jargon, it is hard to fault the East Bengalis, or justify their abandonment by all the major

Piously required, as third-world countries always are by the West, to make their demands known through the ballot box — they did so. They won an absolute majority in the all-Pakistan Assembly.

It was the first general election the country had held, and the result came as a considerable shock. Given the long history of Bengali separatism, from the language and anti-constitution movements of the early Fifties until today, it should not have been so surprising.

Loyalty became more important than ideology. A Bengali majority was the result.

Faced with this, the Islamabad government of Yahya Khan, whose strength is based on an army from which the Bengalis are excluded, panicked, Islamabad fidgeted. The result was carnage.

The result was carnage.

We have glimpsed via television and the newspapers what the West Pakistanis call 'restoring unity'; the Easterners, genocide. The truth may lie somewhere in between the two. But for the forseeable future pessimism with Biafra, many emotional leftwingers in the

As with Biafra, many emotional leftwingers in the West have averted their eyes from the distasteful possibility that non-white people may be filt-reating each other, and concentrated on the humanitarian side.

But beyond the salvage operation, it becomes more complicated, East Pakistan really cannot be called a breakway state in quite the same way.

And the 'exploitation' takes a different form 'the East Bengalis claim that they have been systematically used to subsidise West Pakistan ever since partition.

Over the last two decades, for instance, 70 per cent of Pakistan's investible funds went to the West and only 30 per cent to the East. Seventy-five per cent of revenue was spent in the West, and only 25 per cent in the East. Foreign aid is based on population: yet East Pakistan, with two-thirds of the cash.

The question of aid leads to that of great-power politics. East Bengal does not fit neatly into the cold war pattern, and the positions adopted towards it are particularly complicated. The British are allied with the West Pakistan government in CENTO and SEATO—mere planning organisations, to be sure, but through which weapons can be channelled.

Yahaya Khan's liaks with China, though, are closer and more significant. There are rumors that Peking will create diversionary activity on the Indo-Chinese border if India (backed by the Russians) intervenes in Bengal. China has cynically betrayed the West Bengali communists, who would have liked nothing better than to help their brothers across the border, but could not go it alone. (Perhaps this is final proof that the Chinese have achieved great-power status.) As for Britain, what our government has to say is regarded, since Singapore, with cynical contempt on all sides.

There are still, however, ritual motions to be gone through and lessons to be learned. The ritual concerns the UN. The 75 million East Pakistanis feel they have at least as much 'national' call on the General Assembly as the 45 million Westerners, and are demanding what people always demand in such circumstances: that arm's deliveries be stopped, aid cut off, sanctions imposed and so forth.

None of this will happen. As Connor Cruise O'Brien put

None of this will happen. As Compor Cruise O'Brien put it, the United Nations is like the Delphic Oracle, and always gives the answer the strongest party to a dispute wants to hear. And there, for the time being, it rests.

But not for ever. Pakistan is only the most recent of

It was, of course, a plain case of failure to learn from our own parochial experience — as the whole unhappy history of Ireland has made only too clear.

Since the original foundation of Pakistan, the West Indian, Malaysian, Rhodesian and Arabian federations have all collapsed.

Significantly, each of them, like Pakistan, was a state created from above for reasons of political expediency.

Maritimers Reject Union

FREDERICTON — The first major Maritime politiscian to declare himself unreservedly in favor of Maritime Union spoke up in the New Brunswick Legislature
the other day — Opposition Leader and former premier Louis Robichaud. Louis Robichaud.

A few minutes later he announced he would resign his Kent County seat when the current session ends and retire from provincial politics. (Two days later he was named chairman of the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission.)

We're Surprised

It always seems to surprise residents of other parts of Canada when it is suggested that Maritimers aren't rushing toward political union. The three little provinces are to redical the control of the c so ridiculously small on the map and so similar and so hard up — why aren't they impatient for union and the bigger and better things it is said to promise?

Well, in the first place they are not particularly small in the sense of being geographically compact. It is more than 600 miles from Edmondston in north-western New Brunswick to Sydney in eastern Nova Scotia. They're not easy miles, either.

And the provinces are remarkably different historically, economically, politimended an immediate start on a program leading to full political merger of the three provinces within 10 years. The machinery it proposed in leading the provinces through increasing degrees of cooperation to union included a Council of Maritime Premiers, a five-member planning commission and a Joint Legislative Assembly that would include all MLAs and meet regularly. meet regularly.

The premiers formed their council last January and meet for their first formal session in Fredericton, May 25.

But instead of a powerful commission the provinces have decided to set up a committee of MLAs, five from each province, to have a look at the situation. They'll be backbenchers and opposition members, not cabinet ministers.

If any of the three present premiers is in favor of union, it is only Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick

He said New Brunswick should not be afraid to push vigorously for union, but in the same breath indicated he more co-operation would result in such matters as a regional development program and uniformity of laws. Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island has been insistently noncommittal.

It will not be easy to convince most islanders they'd be better off as a couple of counties administered by remote control

Less Prosperous

Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia has put it bluntly: unity yes, union no. He makes no bones about declaring his province is not about to bail out the other two less prosperous ones.

One day the Maritimes may unite: for one thing, Ottawa might eventually push them into it. But at the moment they are moving further from into it. But at the momen hey are moving further from union as they move closer together.

Hypocrisy and Chaos

What a lovely, homespun phrase that was from Attorney-General Peterson on the problems of banning liquor advertising. Just because a few leaves may fall from your neighbor's tree, he said, there is no reason not to try to clean up your own yard.

A nice thought. But has the attorney-general, or the man, who undoubtedly dictated his legislation, Premier Bennett, taken the time to sit in the backyard a n'd count the leaves blowing from next door—which means the rest of the world?

One recent study said that each year 31 million copies of outside-B.C. publications containing liquor advertising are circulated in B.C. That's quite "a few leaves," 31 million. If you accept the figures in the brief prepared by the Association of Canadian Distillers, and their estimate of three readers per copy, then the wicked foreign liquor advertising can be seen 93 million times a year.

The total includes as outside publications Time Magazing and TV Guide, amounting to perhaps 12 million copies a year. They have in fact been printing recently in Vancouver. But if the government makes the ban stick on B.C. publications, the resemble.

accurate

little doubt that they will once again be printed elsewhere, making the brief's total more

Mr. Peterson's comment on the "few leaves" is as naive and inept as the rest of his statement this week. To be fair, he probably can't be blamed. The way the legislation was introduced and rushed through the legislature suggests that nobody apart from the premier knew it was coming, and had time to prepare a rationalisation that would hold up.

The idea of shutting out all the publications of the outside world seems now to be fading, if one can read between the lines of Mr. Peterson's statement.

But he still doesn't make it clear what the all-important regulations under the changed act will say. He could plan to let outside publications in by mail. He could plan to allow them into B.C. anyway, but prosecute anybody who puts them on public display.

that the act speaks for itself, which is rubbish for anybody seeking precise answers to key questions. It doesn't even define "publish, distribute, or display." which are the key words involved.

And Mr. Peterson did him-self less than justice when he skirted the distillers' charge that since the government is in the liquor business, the legislation is flagrant hypoc-risy.

The distillers, he said purely, want to sell their products, while the government is concerned with the chaos and social problems that follow from sales. He's surely brighter and more honest than that

It's not good enough to pose as a clean government with gloves handling other people's dirty products because of necessity. The government's liquor board is in the rum business up to its armpits, buying in the Caribbean, ageing in England, and bottling here.

Perhaps before the real leaves fall Mr. Peterson will have a better answer for those who genuinely see hypocrisy, chaos and confusion Blowing from that simple piece of ill-considered law.

relax. But he will be back in the House after dinner to listen to the closing speeches, listen to the closing speeches, fighting off what must be terrible boredom so that he can listen attentively to the members until after 10 p.m. Outside the chamber, Lamoureux has many other duties. He is responsible for administration of the Commons, which has a budget of $24 million and a rapidly growing staff of about 1,500. He is expected to do a great deal of entertaining. And he is the MP for Stormont-Dundas, an Ontario constituency which includes Cornwall and has includes Cornwall and has worse than average ployment problems.

So it is no wonder that Lamoureux often works a 12-hour day and sleeps in an empty office equipped with couches adjoining his working

The surprise is that with all the burdens upon him. Lamoureux is perhaps the best Speaker the Commons has ever had. And the danger is that the House will lose his services unless something can be done to change the demanding nature of his job. He is not a man to complain about the burdens, but it is known that he is concerned about the cost his office imposes upon his con-The surprise is that with all tion on the same terms as in 1968, when he underlined his independence by putting aside the Liberal label and standing as an independent.

The problem is two-fold. Behind the scenes, the electors of Stormont-Dundas probably get better service from their MP than most; from their MP than most; after all, ministers and civil servants are likely to give prompt attention to a note from the Speaker. But La-moureux cannot speak in the House on controversial issues or air the grievances of his constituency, so some voters. constituency, so some voters are bound to feel short-

The second problem is that an independent Speaker cuts his constituents off from national politics at election time. There is an agreement among the parties not to oppose him, so the electors have no opportunity to vote for or against the national

There is no easy and complete solution, but some improvement will have to be found if the Commons is to keep Lamoureux in the chair and yet restore full political rights to the people of Sformont-Dundas.

There has been talk for years of installing a perma-nent Speaker who would be completely independent of the government. Stanley Knowles, the NDP rules expert; confid-dant of Speakers and warm admirer of the present Speaker, aired the idea again recently when he suddenly popped up in the House to suggest that Lamoureux's ap-pointment be made perma-nent — and was promptly batted down by the Speaker as out of order.

But in reality there cannot be a permanent Speaker. Each new House of Commons after a general election has to elect its own Speaker, and there has to be a way to vote out of the chair a Speaker who proves himself incompetent or unacceptable. As the government of the day normally controls a majority of votes in the Commons, it has the power to place its own candidate in the chair.

In Britain, there was a

In Britain, there was a convention among the parties that a Speaker, once elected, could continue in the chair more or less as long as he wished, accepted by each succeeding government re-gardiess of party.

This gave many Canadians the idea that Britain had found a formula for installing a permanent and independent Speaker which should be copied in Ottawa.

Speaker which should be copied in Ottawa.

But the illusion dissolved recently when the new Conservative government in London lost little time in easing out the former Labor Speaker and electing one of its own.

'So Canada is now on its own in seeking the best way to fill the chair, with no model to copy. Knowles and others are pushing the idea of a special constituency for the speaker, the constituency of Parliament Hill.

Instead of running for election to the Commons in a regular riding and then being chosen Speaker by vote of the MPs, the Speaker would be directly elected by the members of the Commons to the House and to the chair.

The principal advantage would be that no regular riding would be deprived of the right to vote for a partisan candidate in a gen-eral election to give normal représentation in the Comrepresentation in the Commons. For example, another Liberal could run in Stormont-Dundas, opposed by a Conservative and a New Democrat; Lamoureux could stand as independent candidate for Parliament Hill.

The disadvantage would be that the position of the Speaker in the Commons would be subtly but powerfully changed. He would not be just another MP chosen by his peers and understanding his peers and understanding their problems because he shares them. He would be a member of a different stripe, with no direct contacts with the voting public, and he might quickly become a bureaucrat.

Most seriously, he might not be more independent of the government, but less so. the government, but less so. The government does not control, for example, the electors of Stormont-Dundas who send Lamoureux to the Commons; it would control the majority of the electors of Parliament Hill, the MPs, on whom Lamoureur, would salve whom Lamoureux would rely for election under the proposed system.

But it is easier to pick holes in solutions to the problem of the Speaker than it is to suggest a foolproof alterna-tive. The important thing at this stage, probably, is for the government and the House of Commons to recognize that a serious problem is demanding attention and to refer it to a

It may already be too late to take action before the next election — the office of Speaker is too important to be altered at short notice—but Lamoureux should at least know that relief is on the way if he will just hold on.

called him into his office and said he couldn't work with Warren any more and said he should be bought out. Marquardt said he told Hummel he thought Warren ought to remain with the group, which also included William Osland who was found murdered in February 1969.

PRICE AGREED

Negotiations with Warren began following the meeting, and the $100,000 price was eventually agreed upon. Warren, in earlier testimony, told the court the breakup had been a bitter experience.

Marquardt said Thursday that Warren felt he had been "assassinated" by the group. Marquardt also said he didn't know at the time how Warren was to be paid.

He said the group considered taking out a second mortgage on Glengarry Private Hospital in which the remaining three members of the group were partners.

Eventually, the three took out a loan from Laurentide Finance Corp. Ltd.
The $100,000 kanefits from purchase of Warren's interests were assigned to Victoria Private Hospitals Ltd., another of the group's complicated net of companies.

Marquardt said Hummel either handled the legal affairs of the companies directly or delegated them to a lawyer under his supervision.

"He handled the legal end," Marquardt said.

A lot of pretty nice girls drive Toyota Corollas. (One out of every three Corollas are bought by women.) We figure it's because women just naturally know a good bargain when they see it. They know how much a gallon of gas costs and how nice it is to go up to 35 miles on one. They know about the optional automatic and 4-speed all synchromesh transmissions. (Even if they don't know what all the synchromesh is about.)

They also know that along with every Corolla you get a lot of nice gadgets. Like fully reclining front bucket seats, an electric rear window defroster, Fresh-Flow ventilation, and front disc brakes.

But there's another reason why so many women buy the Corolla. They like the way it looks. And they naturally feel that one pretty face and nice figure deserves another.

And so it does.

Two Winnipeg businessmen, both shareholders in CFI, filed in January to wind up the affairs of CFI, dissolving the company and subjecting its affairs to direction of a court. The move is intended,

Those who had invested directly in Westbank got most of their money back but another block of shares was held by Canadian Finance and Investments Ltd. of Winnipeg. HELD SS MILLION

That company, formed of 3,000 investors most of whom lived in British Columbia, bought 200,000 units of stock valued at $3 million — about 18 per cent of the Westbank issue — in 1964. Since the money wouldn't be invested directly in Westbank until the bank was incorporated, the funds were invested elsewhere in the interim.

Stevens was not only chair.

Stevens was not only chair-man of the bank but president of CFI and of Toronto-based British International Finance and Investments Ltd. The Toronto company was the holding company for York Lambton Corp. Ltd., which at one stage held 50.2 per cent of Westbank stock.

Westbank stock.

Because CFT was caught with a shortage of funds when time came to invest the money in the bank, it was arranged for BIF to acquire its assets. Shareholders in CFI were offered BIF shares to compensate for the changeover but many simply held the CFI shares. Shortly afterwards the value of BIF shares plunged drastically.

shares plunged drastically.

After the demise of Westbank, difficulties arose between BIF and York Lambton that required a court settlement to determine how the remaining $2.7 million assets of the bank should be divided.

As a result, an action between CFT, whose assets BIF had acquired, and York Lambton was initiated in 1968. Mr. Justice Roy Matas of Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench ruled in September, 1979, that CFT should be given ownership of the shares of the bank and the $2.7 million.

OTTAW INTERVENES

The federal inspector of bankruptcy objected to this order of division. Mr. Justice Matas ruled six weeks later the money be held in abeyance until the Manitoba Court of Appeal ruled on the question.

U.K. Mail Taking the 'Clipper Ship' Route

ELIZABETH FORBES

Although the postal strike in the British Isles has been over now for at least six weeks, Victoria citi-zens are still ex-per iencing some queer foul-ups in there's one happe ning that makes you wonder whether the malls are now coming by clipper ship around The Horn.

Two days before Christmas a woman in London wrote to a friend in this city to thank her for a Yuletide gift. She explained in the letter that she was writing at that time in order to beat the rumored

Support Sought

B.C. labor leaders will be called together soon to dis-cuss ways of organizing province-wide support for the Sandringham Private Hospital its seventh month.

The labor council decided to give the women a cheque for $100 and pay their travel expenses. Delegates also chipped in $123 in individual donations.

Labor council president Syd Thompson said he will arrange for a meeting between the B.C. Federation of Labor and the Canadian Union of Public Employees, to which local private hospital workers are affiliated, "to get something going for additional support."

The two dozen striking women are currently receiving $20 a week in strike pay from CUPE.

at least) until nearly mid-January and by all yard-sticks, her letter should have been well out of England by ever, for it only arrived in Victoria this week, 115 days after it was posted.

Where in the name of all the post offices in the British Isles and in Canada, had it been between then and now?

Into the bargain the Victoria recipient had to pay additional postage, she guessed because the rates might have gone up in the British Isles since the strike.

Curiousity about that extra postage led me to telephone Ken Stofer, public relations-officer at the Victoria post office.

No official word has been received of an increase in rates in the British Isles, hesaid, but it could have happened. If so, the letter would be taxed at that end. The extra postage would then be collected and kept here.

"It's a universal postal rule," Stofer said, "the same thing would happen recipro-cally, if extra postage was needed on mail from here to and kept over there."

Here's another happening equally as hard to understand. A Victoria woman holidaying in Hawaii last November decided to send her sister in England a Christmas gift from there. She had it carefully packed and malled it with all the necessary stamps and stickers before she returned

She expected to hear, well before Christmas, that the parcel had arrived safely but no letter came before the strike nor did one arrive after it was all over.

Then, last week if you please, she received an airmail letter from her sister, saying the gift had just been delivered. Again let me ask, where in thunder had that parcel been between last November and this April? Can you answer that one, Ken?

Add to these frustrating happenings the fact that there has also been a delay recently in airmail communications from the British Isles, sometimes for as many as seven or eight days, and you have a situation in which people are beginning to wonder just what is going on.

Mr. Caouette told a news conference there is no longer a rift between western Social Crediters and the Quebec-based Urging greater economic independence for the provinces, Mr. Cacuette said a Social Credit government would allow provinces to develop by borrowing from the Bank of Canada rather than seeking foreign credit.

The government makes interest-free loans to underprivileged countries and should do the same for its own provinces, he said

The Creditiste leader said he favors the monarchy, but provinces should have greater freedom to make their own decisions through a greater decentralization of government.

There are more than 1100 Dateun dealers across Canada and the U.S.A.

It was about five or six months ago that the question was first put to A. J. "Buck" Houle. Asked if he was interested in the job of general manager of the California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League, Houle neatly sidestepped the issue. In other words, he didn't exactly say "yes," but he didn't say "no," either.

This week, Buck Houle was a visitor in town. "I just love this place," he said at first. But really, even if he did sneak off and play golf at Colwood, Houle actually was here on business.

For he still is the managing director of Hockey Canada. And if you ask "what's that, now that the national team has disbanded?" he has an answer.

"I am in charge of the scholarship program," he explained. "And I am visiting every university in the country as part of that program."

explained. "And I am visiting every university in the county as part of that program."

Which is what brought the former general manager of the Victoria Maple Leafs of the Western Hockey League to the Island officially. He wanted to have a talk to Athletic Director Bob Bell at the University of Victoria regarding hockey scholarships from Hockey Canada, and also to set up one of the four area tournaments for university players that will be hold correct the country.

"I think you can say a tournament will be held in Vancouver," he said, indicating that because of its geographical location and greater potential drawing power, the mainland city was better suited than the Island to host an event of this nature.

There can be no argument on that score, and there will be none, because if Houle could have put the tourney here, he likely would have done so. "I still think of Victoria as my second home," he once said, which is probably why he "took a day off" when he arrived.

"I just had to get out to Colwood," he said, "and get in a game of golf." Has he lost his touch? Not likely. But he was a trifle disappointed. "I had an 88," he said. "That's not too had," said a listener, "It was those 42 putts that killed me," Houle went on. "But I was happy about one thing. I parred two and three, and boy, when I can get a par on three, I'm happy. I put my second shot six feet from the mast."

Buck was playing with a couple of swiftles — Joe Evans, former Cougar leftwinger, and Bill Schvetz, greenskeeper now at Gorge Vale, but a highly prized defenceman with the Maple Leafs in Houle's era here.

"Then I came to the fourth hole," Houle went on. "And I took a great big, fat eight!"

"The course was in great shape," he added, and as I head?" aboved.

The course was in great shape," he added, and as I hadn't played since October, I felt pretty good about it—except for my putting."

But is he really happy in his work—flying about the country, selling a scholarship plan for hockey-playing youth?

The reply was straightforward, which was the mark of Houle the manager here for his three years with the Leafs.

"I'd rather be in hockey," he declared.

And did that mean that the California position was still

And did that mean that the California position was still under consideration?

"I've talkd with them about six or seven times," Houle answered. "But there is nothing definite. Yet."

It is not that Houle lan't aware of the problem at Oakland. It's been a continuing one since the club was first granted an expansion franchise four years ago. The club has never been a winner, on the ice, or at the box office.

Last year, the controversial Charles O. Finley, who also owns the Oakland team of the American Baseball League, took over the operation of the club, and almost immediately came to a disagreement with then general manager Franke Selke, Jr. So much so that Selke packed up and left, leaving Fred Glover as general manager and coach.

Fred Glover as general manager and coach.

More recently, Selke, in a television interview, was frightfully frank in his rating of Oakland, and Finley.

"It's the owner," he said, "I don't think he's good for hockey. Selke also said the location of the team was wrong, from an attendance viewpoint, and that San Francisco, not Oakland should be the home for the club.

Oakland should be the home for the club.

Hinting that it was bad operation, Selke said he was glad to be out of it.

Perhaps Buck thinks so as well, perhaps not. He wasn't saying. For when pressed further for details of his future, he said:

You know, he (Finley) is a funny guy." But then so am I," he quickly added.

STEWART The Outdoors

Backpacking has undergone a revolution, both in technizue and equipment, since the days of the

In the past decade, packframes of aluminum and magnesium alloys have appeared on the market to make the wood and canvas affairs of yesteryear seem clumsy and

Wooden contrivances are still being sold, chiefly because of their greater structural strength for packing heavy loads.

But we also note that within the past year a United States-based manufacturer has brought out a new alloy frame called the "Freighter" which might spell the death of those older "packboards."

The alloy frames are designed to place the centre of older "packboards."

The alloy frames are designed to place the centre of gravity in the load nearer to the shoulders rather than in the centre of the back as was the case in the wooden frames.

Carrying the weight high on the back imparts a natural forward motion to the backpacking enthusiast while his counterpart using a wooden frame is forced into overcoming a backward pull.

Greater use of nylon, both in bags to fit the frame and a backward pull.

Greater use of nylon, both in bags to fit the frame and for various straps on the frame itself, has further improved the backpacker's tot.

Nylon is immune to mildew, resists tears better than canvas or duck and once waterproofed, needs no further

Another innovation which has helped turn backpacking into a family-orientated sport is the development of lightweight freeze-dried food.

Freeze-drying is a procedure to extract the water from frozen meats, fruits and vegetables through a process called sublimation.

This not only cuts the weight of food drastically, but also preserves it indefinitely. Add water, and freeze-dried food begins to look like the real thing.

The taste of meat, which looks like cardboard or pressed sawdust when first taken from the can, suffers little in the transition. But it sure beats the taste of "fresh" meat which less street a couple of daws in a bot read.

has spent a couple of days in a hot pack.

In addition to these improvements there are ultra-light, nylon-covered down sleeping bags, padded hip belts to take a little of the strain from packing off the shoulders and pintaised stoves which boil water in a couple of minutes to make ad staves which boll water in a couple of save which boll water in a couple of save so much easier.

All things considered, backpacking is a pretty good way travel — free from the bustle of highways and anxieties acciated with finding campsites or motel rooms.

After giving up eight home runs in six games, Atlanta Braves have finally learned how to pitch to Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh Pirates.

Very carefully.

The Pittsburgh fence-wrecker continued his siege on Atlanta. Thursday night, ripping his 16th homer of the young season to tie a major league record for circuit smashes in April. The Piretes was 7-4. Pirates won 7-4.

Stargell, himself, wasn't ov-rly impressed.

'I'm not even going to let myleif think of records," said the bull-strong leftfielder.

'What happens when I break a record, other than it goes into the record book? Do they make a statue of me?"

Stargell's fourth-inning clout carried over the centre field lence—more than 480 feet away.

Youbou Sawmill Shutdown Ends

YOUBOU—BCFP's Cowichan sawmill division at Youbou will return to full production Monday morning after a two-week shutdown.

Manager Jim Warr said today that this involves the 370 men laid off for the two-week period but not the 70 men laid off from graveyard about a month previous. "The graveyard shutdown is permanent," he said.

Company officials said the lay-off was due to poor log supply, railcar shortage and the present export market conditions.

"Regarding log supply we are in good shape," Warr said. "The railcar and market situation is still tight."

in the first-proposed area adjacent to Royal Athletic-Park on Caledonia.

The question arose in council when Ald. Peter Pollen asked what is becoming of that particular piece of land, which cost the city upwards of $200,000, the money taken out of the tax-sale land fund.

The current plan, of course, is to use the extra land for park, the kind of park that has cars on it.

As for the kind of park that has grass on it, "I knew it would never be done," said Savage.

Hummel Trial in Fifth Day

The Crown, in its fifth day of presenting evidence against Victoria lawyer David Hummel, attempted today to show that the accused had knowledge and intent to evade taxes.

Hummel is charged with evading taxes on $127,000. The case centres around business dealings by the accused in a number of companies in the 1964-65 period. (See also Page

Prosecutor Robert Hutchison argued today that documents prepared by Hummel showed the accused had a "detailed knowledge" of accounting procedures—enough to know the difference between non-taxable capital gains and taxable income.

WHY BRITANNIA?

413 Feet, 255 Men To Cross the Gulf

I yield to no man, sir, as the saying goes, not even to that dedicated monarchist, J. Courtney Haddock, in my all but irrational sentimentality toward the Royal Family, doubtless a symptom of the incurable disease called Anglophilia.

That dutifully said, I must add that this business of the royal yacht Britannia demonstrates yet again the appalling bone-headedness of the public relations advice that so often seems a deliberate conspiracy to tarnish the image of the dear girl who occupies our throne.

If you ask, in the war-time question, "Is this trip necessary?" you can come up with all sorts of answers, all of them ending up as "No." Indeed, if ever there was a case of over-doing the ostentatious trappings of old-fashioned, outdated royalty in times that require the monarchy to develop the common touch this, surely, is it.

There she sits, hidden from the public eye, in the Esquimalt dockyard, all 413 gorgeous, royal-blue feet of her, all 5,000 tons, a gallant ship on a downright bloody frivolous

And there they sit, on their royal-blue butts, an $18,900-a-year rear-admiral, 20 officers, 27 chief petty officers, 26 petty officers, 172 leading and able seaman ranks, not to mention eight violinists, one violist, two cellists, one double bassist, two horn-players, a flautist, a clarinetist and an oboist, all half-way around the globe from their homes on a Mickey Mouse assignment.

Why did this beautiful tub sail some 8,000 nautical miles out of her way from the South Pacific Seas, turning north at the Panama Canal instead of paying her toll at the gate and sensibly heading for her harbor at Portsmouth?

Why is she sitting here now,

at Portsmouth?

Why is she sitting here now, while her 255-men crew idly cool their heels, at an over-all cost reliably put at $40,000 a week?

The answer, dear friends, is that HM Yacht Britannia will be involved in two ferry-runs that could be handled micely by any 40-foot cruiser loaned by a loyal member of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, that be nancied incely by any 40-root cruiser loaned by a loyal member of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, that she will offer an air-conditioned apartment for Elizabeth, Philip and Anne for three or four nights and that she will provide the salon for a private dinner party. This needed 255 of a crew on a 413-foot sea-going vessel? This needed $40,000 a week of taxpayers' money? I mean, really, did Elizabeth honestly need this gorgeous great vessel to cross the straits of Georgia from Vancouver or to cover the 150-odd miles from Comox to Victoria? I mean, really, did Elizabeth honestly require Britannia's air-conditioned Royal apartment and the eight violinists, one violist, two cellists, one double bassist, two horn players, a flautist, a clarinetist and an oboist?

Couldn't we have just fixed them up with a nice, adjoining suite in the old wing of The Empress and resurrected Billy Tickle's trio, or, for that matter, to do it big, Billy's Ten Tantalizing Toe-Ticklers, at union rates?

It's not just that this great ship has come all the way here for a function that, as far as Victoria and Britannia are concerned, will last just three of the 10 days of the royal visit in early May, but that the only people who'll get a real look at her will be a few select members of the Establishment invited to dinner. Hell, even American submarines welcome the peasants aboard for a look around.

The whole thing, indeed, though you can bet Elizabeth had little or nothing to do with it, smacks of that other Elizabeth, Burton by name, commanding Richard to "Do bring the boat, darling." It's not so much pomp and ceremony as Jackie and Ali.

It is bound to have repercussions on both sides of the Atlantic.

Atlantic.

In Britain, where Prime Minister Edward Heath has recently withdrawn the free milk supply from the school children because the treasury is so bare, there's bound to be the same sort of questioning that came 11 years ago when Margaret and her Tony, the easy riders of royally, used the same ship, at the public expense, to enjoy a West Indies because the same ship, at the public expense, to enjoy a West Indies because the same ship.

same snip, at the honeymoon.

It just happens to come at a time, too, when large sections of the British press, concerned that Prince Charles is a polo-playing fop hermetically sealed from the realities of life, are saying that it's time the monarchy caught the vibes of the everyday Briton.

In this country, threatened now with a whole new.

of the everyday Briton.

In this country, threatened now with a whole new. divisive debate on the monarchy by the forthcoming recommendations of a parliamentary constitution committee that just may suggest we turn into a republic, this madly expensive and meaningless "show the flag" expedition will surely be ammunition for the anti-monarchists who hold that the whole ammunition of the expension of the country is out of teach.

the whole apparatus of the crown is out of touch. Welcome the Queen here? Why, of course, bless her heart. But really, you know, someone should have decided to leave the floating toy at home.

Completion and renovations will see phasing out of the George Jay Annex at 2549 Quadra. The annex has two classes of Grade 4 pupils and two classes of children ranging from 9 to 13 who are learning to speak English.

The original cost of the additions was estimated at $134,000 when the school referendum was approved in 1907, which illustrates how fast construction costs are increasing.

No Sense Applying for a Census Job By PETER MCNELLY

Almost all of more than 400 census-taker jobs in southern Vancouver Island have been filled before they were adver-tised, officials confirmed today.

The announcement ended hopes for hundreds of residents who have been awaiting release of information on how to apply for jobs with regional constructions.

Regional office representa-tive for the lower Island region Ward Palmer said today most of 16 census commissioners from Port Renfrew to Sidney have names of enough applicants to fill between 25 and 30 census interviewer positions open to each commissioner.

The names were released last Friday, but were not delivered to Victoria newspapers until Thursday. Palmer said it is regrettable that more jobs are not open, but because of high unemployment people "somehow" knew whom to contact before release of the commissioners.

A spokesman for the regional census office in Vancouver, Clare Thompson, admitted that late release of the names has been a problem.

"Unfortunately, the timing of all this has not been the best," Thompson said...
Canada Manpower's assistant manager in Victoria, Bill Rapanos, said his office only found out Thursday from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics names of area commissioners.

The interviewers will start visiting Greater Victoria households on Tuesday. May 25. They will leave questionnaires which residents are legally bound to complete by June 1.

The 1970 decennial census is detailed. The DBS is seeking information on the number of persons in a household, their religion and place of origin, employment status and history, wages, hours of work per week, 1970 income, education, marital status, type of dwelling, rent or mortgage payments and other similar questions.

Thompson said he hopes most people won't think the government is prying into private lives, because the questions are not too personal and they help the government evaluate the changes in the

It is not surprising that after many a largely thank-less year. Miss Dove might become a little vinegary.

This state of affairs didn't change for Miss Dove or her colleagues until comparatively recent years. Then expanding population brought about a demand for teachers that far exceeded the supply.

I suppose because they weren't challenged, they lugged along in British Columbia with their federation, in the comfortable assurance that it would guarantee them the equivalent of a closed shop indefinitely.

They made mistakes. They assumed that the taxpayer, grumble though he might, shared their view that education fully justified the massive expenditure it commanded. There was considerable puramelling of a government which deserved

The strike merely annoyed a provincial community which needs teachers, but is quick to turn on them. Some of this animosity is a hangover from youth, when Miss Dove represented authority. It stems in part from the unreasonable but widely-held conviction that the teacher paid from taxes should be content with a lower wage than the person employed in private industry. Neither government nor school boards were moved toward a change of heart by toward a change of heart by the strike.

Even before it materialized, government had vengefully legislated away the federations olosed shop clause. There's talk of policing the trade — an endeavor in which the hostile parent and the disaffected student are apparently to have a part.

Co-Ed Dorms Helps Grades Say Students

By BICHARD M, COHEN

BALTIMORE (WP) - University of Maryland students and administrators asked the board of regents Wednesday to allow dormitory residents to receive visitors of the opposite sex without restriction. They said, among other things, that it would improve grades.

"I'm certain he would not send them to a place where they would be morally or physically harmed," Connie Otradovec, an officer of the Residence Hall Association, told the regents.

Driesell, whose current team became the first since 1965-68 to finish over the 500 mark, said later in a telephone interview that he would like his players to live in the Currently, the 39 residence halls on the college park c am pus forbid members of the opposite sex from visiting after midnight on weekdays or after 1:30 a.m. on weekends. The rules are supposed to be enforced by student monitors who, contending they are not policemen, usually look the other way, according to testimony at Wednesday's hearing.

Only about 8,000 of the College Park Campus' 30,000 students live in the dormitories. the remainder either commute from home, live in fraternity or sorority houses or take nearby apartments.

Despite some charges from off-campus critics that an abandonment of the rules would lead to increased cohabitation, university administrators told the regents that the students could be trusted and that the time has come for a change.

An administration-student plan proposes that each dormitory set its own rules by secret ballot.

The university released the findings of a poll in which parents were asked their views about dormitory visiting of members of the opposite sex. Of the 458 who responded, 423 said their son or daughter "can act as a mature and responsible adult."

Books Do Not a Library Make

In The Music Man, Marion the Librarian had to sit and watch while "professor" Harold Hill turned her quiet, orderly library into a dance

The revolution proposed by Alice Simpson, and all other librarians who believe libraries are "People Places," isn't as flambowent, but it might rub supporters of the "old style" library the wrong way, "We still have to convince some of our own members that they should be offering a service, instead of acting as service, instead of acting as eustodians for the books," said Mrs. Simpson, co-ordinator of a Citizens' Conference on Libraries, to be held here May 3.

"Most people still think of a library as a place to go when they want something to read.

library as a place to go when they want something to read. They don't realize what a library can do for them. When I want a book to read I usually go to a bookstore. I go to a library when I want information."

She feels this lack of understanding of a library's true role is the fauit of librarians themselves.

"We've sat and waited for people to come to us. Not one public library in this province has a full-time, or even partitime, public relations officer on staff. No business would operate this way."

Mrs. Simpson, who works out of New Westminster, is field consultant for the library development commission, a branch of the provincial secretary's department. A professional librarian, she took the job when it was created a little over a year ago, because she thinks librarians should get out and tell the public what they are doing.

"I feel the individual citizen tell the public what they are doing.

'I feel the individual citizen could get more for his library dollar than he does from a lot of other tax-supported items. Yet library spending is very low on the list of priorities.

'For just a few tax dollars more, libraries could privide the public with a wide range of information services — not just books, but films, microfilms, periodicals, records, service to shut-ins, the retarded, slow learners, and so on.

on.
"But we have to make the public aware of the potential of library service."
This is the aim of the B.C. Centennial Citizens' Conference, and Provincial Library Week, May 2 to 8.

During the week libraries all over the province will be presenting programs to show the public what they are doing.

The Citizens' Conference is the first of its kind in Canada, Alice Simpson has a particular interest in it.

"The conference was started almost three years ago as a project of the B.C. Librarians Association." she explained.

Alice Simpson of New Westminster was in Victoria recently to make arrangements for the B.C. Centennial Citizen's Conference on Libraries, which she is co-ordinating.

"I was on the board of the Washington Library Associa-tion at the time of the Washington State Governor's Conference."

"Another board member.
Ella Pretty, also knew about these conferences, and we suggested holding something similar here."

"The first thing we had to do was convince the trustees and other librarians in the province that it was a good idea."

In the States, these conferences are called by the governor. The conference to be held here is sponsored by the provincial government and is an official centennial project.

Vital to Tomorrow's World," and will deal with the chang-ing role of libraries.

ing role of libraries.

"As its name implies, this is a citizens' conference."
Mrs. Simpson said. "Only about 15 per cent of the delegates will be librarians or trustees. The others will be leading citizens and government leaders.

"As it is the first of it's kind in Canada, we've invited observers from other provinces, in the hope that similar conferences will be held elsewhere."

inces, in the hope that similar conferences will be held elsewhere."

The conference is invitational and will be attended by 250 delegates.

"In Washington, we found that the real value of the conference came from regional conferences held later. Citizens' conferences held later. Citizens' conferences are held very rapely. The idea is that delegates will go back home and organize conferences in their area to discuss how they can improve library service in their area."

Mrs. Simpson also feels the conference will encourage cooperation between different kinds of libraries, regional, public and school.

"As it is now, all the libraries are going their own way. On the lower mainland, for instance, there are nine public libraries. You could live across the street and not be able to use the library hecause it wasn't in your district. There are areas that have no library service at all.

"The libraries have to serve the needs of their own area, of course, but I hope that at the conference we can discuss ways to co-ordinate the different services."

Even the Nicest Girls Can't Spy on the DAR

Washington — Un til Wednesday, I hadn't been thrown out of anywhere since the age of 10 when a neighborhood biddy called the police to eject me from her garden for picking flowers. My record was clean at some of the classiest spots in town — the White House, embassies, millionaires' man-sions.

or the classiest spots in fown bassies, millionaires' mansions.

Then it happened. I got thrown out of constitution hall by the Daughters of the American Revolution — not once, but three times.

The good ladies banned the press from their debate because they felt one of my colleagues reported an internal squabble unfairly last year. (My (male) editor gallantly suggested I would be the perfect reporter to try and infiltrate the meeting "because I looked and sounded the part."

Throughout the night I wondered if he meant to compliment my conservative style of dress and my Boston accent, or was he really implying I am a fuddy-duddy. So it was with very mixed feelings that I arose early, donned a below-the-kneelength suit, adorned it with a double strand of pearls and a gold shoulder pin, and set off on my app mission.

The absence of ticket takers or badge checkers at the door at 8:45 a.m. allowed me to wander in and take a seat among the delegates, in flowered hats and timeless dresses. I was feeling pretty smug about my own appearance and indeed my presence there when, just as the debate on resolutions began, a young page came up and asked for my badge.

I explained away my ribbonless chest by saying I was a reconsective me me me in ust

A page escorted me around the corridor, chatting pleasantly a bout Washington's springtime. I thought perhaps she would buy the prospective member alibi. But when she said, "The press is not admitted," I knew the game was up. was up.

Next I ducked into a small room market "pit" and closed the door. I found myself in the orchestra pit directly under the podium. I could hear the proceedings through the floor. Standing on a chair to press my ear against the ceiling. I was busily scribbing down the Daughter's comments against a new Panama Canal and in praise of J. Edgar Hoover when a trap door opened. A face peered in and said, "out!" Foiled again.

I wandered back to the corridor a nd nonchalantly and actual traing to read Through labyrinthine back-stage passages we went. We paused before a uniformed security guard and I envis-ioned arrest. 'Astounded'

PENTICTON, B.C. (CP) —
Mrs. George E. Tait of Toronto, national president of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, said Thursday she is
"astounded" that the monarchy is coming under criticism at a time when the Queen is coming to Canada.
Mrs. Tait said in an interview the IODE believes that if the parliamentary committee on the constitution is to assist in the development of constitutional reform in Canada, it should leave the monarchy question alone.
There was little evidence the monarchy system inhibits political reform and it afforded a safeguard against the exercise of absolute power by any one party.

The surprises and discoveries came mostly in Anthony's area of the festival and they really began back on Tuesday evening when a top-hatted male voice ensemble dubbed the Village Squires, knocked everyone in the aisles with their professional style and what Anthony described as their "perfect old-style Hollywood barbershop singing."

GROUPS TIE

Unable to choose between them and the quite different, traditional mode of the competing Arion Male Choir, he tied the two groups, thus creating a knot for the awards committee that must decide how to aliot the CBC choral prize.

Then on Thursday, in a teenage vocal duet class, selections ranged from classical and art songs to an improvisational style of folk singing.

However, he told them, he wished they had been better prepared, less tentative. And he quoted Sir Thomas Beccham, who had said, "What-ever you are doing, whether you are conducting or misconducting do it with

In the evening program, Anthony was delighted with the campfire and musical camedy classes, where per-formances came complets with prope and action.

Flower Shows-Something for All

By HILDA BEASTALL

Today and tomorrow every amateur grower of a plant whether it is in a pot, a balcony planter or a wild woodland acreage will find something of interest in two Greater Victoria plant and flower shows.

Vancouver Island Rock and Alpine Garden Society is holding its annual two-day spring show in the hall at 1020 Pandora Avenue, next to St. Andrew's School (formerly St. Louis); doors open for public viewing today until 10 p.m., and tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 9:30.

The Cadboro Bay flower show tomorrow in St. George's Parish Hall, just off Maynard Road in Cadboro Bay, may be visited from 2 until 8 p.m., Saturday only.

These group efforts are worth something in human involvement, quite apart, and even without, the competitive angle.

As more people live with more automation, as more numbers are assigned to humans for faster processing of data by computers, so the need increases for more contact between humans and any part of the natural environment.

The art of bonzai is one which may be the key to keeping apartment dwellers in touch with growing plants. While bonzai is admittedly an art, it depends for its success on the closest co-operation with nature.

Without a deep knowledge of the plants being cultured a grower has little hope of obtaining anything of beauty.

Bonzai is just about in its 15th year in Victoria; still infancy as far as this ancient art is rated, but delightful specimens being developed by local enthusiasts appear each time a showing is made.

Plants for troughs, also suitable for apartment or condominium dwellers, will be seen too at the rock and alpine show.

It is doubtful if anyone having an affinity with plants could go to either of the shows today and tomorrow without finding something of use and value for their own environment.

Shrubs just right for a terraced or paved sitting-out spot will be seen, to provide either a color note or a foliage texture of interest. Rhodos, camellias and less commonly seen shrubs will seem to be exactly what are wanted to create a bed of loveliness near a new home.

Native plants, originally collected in the vast area of the Pacific Northwest, may be new to you. Viewing them at close range without the hardships of plant hunting, they are all pleasure.

The rock and alpine show has these; the Cadboro Bay folks will have splendid cut blossoms from their spring gardens for your enjoyment.

CRYPTIC CROSSWORD

By FRED KARPIN

By FRED KARPIN

At even the very highest schelon of play, the success of any given contract frequently depends on guessing the location of a key card. More often than not, the expert will guess correctly by properly interpreting the clues which have been divulged in the bidding and-or the play. The theme of "guessing" is the subject of today's deal, which arose in the 1970 National Championships. East-West vulnerable, South deals.

♦ A 3 ♥ A 2 ♦ K J 10 7 4 2 4095 EAST • Q J 9 8 7

VJ963 # J 10 8 6 2 SOUTH $ 105 $ 0 105 $ A 0.83 $ A K 7 4

The bidding:
South West North East

10 Pass 24 24

24 Pass 4 NT Pass

50 Pass 5 NT Pass

60 Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Nine of Q.

The opening trum p lead was won by South's queen, after which a trump was played to the board's ace. Next came the ace, queen, and king of clubs, after which South's remaining club was ruffed in dummy. The ace of hearts was then cashed, and this was followed by the deuce of hearts.

Had East put up the king, declarer would have had no problem. With his queen of hearts established as a winner, dummy's losing spade ner, dummy's losing spade would be discarded on it.

But East did not make things simple for declarer. When the heart deuce was led off the board, East nonehalantly followed with the seven-spot. Declarer now had to guess whether to put up the ten (hoping that East had the jack) or to play the queen instead (hoping that East possessed the king). If he guessed wrong, he would also have to lose a spade trick.

Actually, South had no serious problem. East had made a vulnerable overcall at the two level on an aceless hand. So South assumed that East certainly figured to have the king of hearts. Therefore, on the second heart lead, South inserted his queen. His only loser was a spade trick. If there are those who feel that if West had opened the king of spades ("always lead the highest of partner's suit if you have a doubleton in his suit") that the slam contract would have been defeated, they are wrong. Dummy's ace would have won this trick, after which trumps would be drawn. Next would follow four club leads, dummy ruffing the fourth club.

A spade would then be led

A spade would then be led — and East, upon winning would become an end-play victim. Assuming he led a low heart, South would put up his queen. And if, instead. East led a spade, South would ruff the trick while simultaneously discarding the board's losing deuce of hearts. Actually, the "killing" opening lead would have been the spade six.

Joe held out a little cloth bag, "Marbles, Dad," he said. "A few red, and the rest green. No peeking, but take one."

one."

Don dipped into the bag and pulled out a green. Trying again he got a second green which he placed on the table beside the first. "You seem short on reds," he commented. "What are the odds against a third green if I try once more?"

Once more?"

THE NAME OF THE GAME. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun.) Veteran stars Keenan Wynn and Joan Blondell offer some perky performances in this episode which focuses on a social problem involving ex-convicts trying to help themselves. Halfway House runs into neighborhood objections, principally from Joe Williams (Wynn). Ex-con Eddie Gannon (Darren McGavin) enlists the aid of Dan Farrell (Robert Stack). Miss Blondell plays a travel agent with (ex-scruples.

A smelly situation; the Partridges become contaminated by a skunk. They are on the verge of a forced cancellativn of an important concert until they happily find an antidote. Shirley Jones stars as the singing mother of the five Partridges.

FRIDAY NIGHT MOVIES. 9 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. "Sons and Lovers." (1960). This is the screen version of D. H. Lawrence's class novel, accepted as being autobiographical. It stars Dean Stockwell as an artistically talented coal miner's son who is completely dominated by his mother (Wendy Hiller). Trevor Howard plays the father and Mary Ure is a romantic interest, Well acted and reasonably directed, although tedious at times. The setting is the English mining town of Bestwood.

HEIFETZ. 10 p.m., Channel 5. What a treat for music lovers! The great violinist Jascha Heifetz in an hour-long display of his virtuosity heralded as his "concert debut" in television. From Bach's "Chaconne" to Gershwin's "It Ain't Necessarily So." viewers will see Heifetz perform on his 1742 Guarnerius violin. The show was taped in segments, mostly at studios in Paris, except for "Scottish Fantasy" with the French National Orchestra, before a packed audience at the Theatre des Champs Elysees. There also are some scenes at his home in California. A rare, and marvellous treat.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

A while ago I wrote here about an excellent book by my friend Dr. J. Louise Despert called "Children of Divorce," which I felt would be of interest to parents going through the problems of a divorce, in helping them to help their children though this difficult experience.

Now I have on my desk another fine book written by Richard A. Gardner, M.D., a child psychiatrist, who says that he got a number of children to help him to know what to write about. The book, called "The Boys and the Girls Book About Divorce," is written for children to read either by themselves or with a parent, and as Dr. Gardner says, "In this book I give children advice about some of the things they can do. Many children whose parents are divorced are very unhappy, but they don't think that there's anything that they can do about their troubles. This is not so. In this book I'll tell you about some of the ways you can help yourself. I'll talk about many of the usual problems which the children of divorced parents have. Some will be like the ones you have, others will not. After each problem has been discussed, I tell you what things you can do to help yourself if you have that problem."

talk about what the book says.

Dr. Gardner discusses "Who's to Blame?" and talks about the fact that there are some things that neither the child nor his parents can control. He says that sometimes a child may get the idea that something naughty that he did caused his parents to get divorced, but this is not true. As he says, "Children who think that their parents got divorced because they have been bad are often very sad about it. They may spend a lot of time thinking about how had they were and trying to think of ways to be good so that their parents will marry again. Often these children do not spend much time with their friends and do not pay attention to their schoolwork."

Dr. Gardner talks about the fact that although parents may do things that hurt the child, it is generally unintentional. He points out that parents make mistakes and are not perfect, and this is out that parents make mistakes and are not perrect, and this is something that a child has to learn to accept.

The book has chapters on how to get along better with your divorced mother and your divorced father, on how to get along better with your stepfather and stepmother, and about anger, love, and the fear of being alone. It is helpful not only for the child, but for his parents as well. If I were a person going through a divorce and had a child, I certainly would like to have this book for him to read.

The book was published in 1970 by Haddon Craftsmen, Inc., Scranton, Pennsylvania, and costs $7.95.

Loyalty To Queen Secure

Reaffirming its loyalty to the Queen would only help to undermine that loyalty, Vic-toria council decided Thursday.

Piqued by news stories that a Canadian parliamentary committee plans to advocate abolishing the monarchy, Ald. Percy Frampton introduced a motion asking council to deplore these reports, and state firmly that Elizabeth II is indeed the "Queen of Canada."

tried to get themselves out of the trap.

Ald. Peter Follen said the motion presupposed a lack of loyalty. Ald. Robert Baird and Ald. Harold Olafson agreed.

Ald. Ove Witt, who had seconded Frampton's motion, retracted, just as Frampton got to his feet.

"Yes, that's what I was going to do," added Frampton, and council's loyalty, to the Queen was again secure.

Seafood Said Safe

Times News Services VANCOUVER — Canadian seafood, despite the presence of an organism known to be responsible for food poisoning in Japan, was judged com-pletely safe Thursday by a fisheries department spokes-

Don Wilson, chief of the federal fisheries inspection branch here said concentration of the organism, called vibrio parahaemolyitous, in Canadian seafood is small. In any case, he added, waters here are too cold for it to become a problem.

LAST VOTE VITAL ON TOWNHOUSES

A two-thirds majority of all members of council will be necessary for both third and final readings of a bylaw to recome seven acres at 3887 Gordon Head Road for a 72-unit townhouse project.

First and second readings of the bylaw need just a simple majority; a Saanich spokesman explained Thursday.

The third and the final readings would, then, need six votes out of the nine on council to pass and become law.

At a public hearing Tuesday night, council voted 5-to-4 in favor of the project. Two months ago, council voted 6-to-3 against.

favor of the project. Two months ago, council voted 6-to-3 against.

Ald. William Campbell and Mayor Hugh Curtis switched their votes, joining previous supporters Aldermen Leslie Passmore, Edith Gunning and Edward Lum.

Remaining opposed were Aldermen William Noel, Alan Newberry, Foster Isherwood and Frank Waring.

The bylaw is not expected to come before council at least until its May 17 meeting.

Bath, Kitchen Counselling Free

British Columbia's second professional counselling service for homeowners planning new mechanical installations for bath or kitchen opened in a rebuilt Johnson Street location today.

The concept of offering free counselling for plumbing and heating services is unique in Canada, and the new Victoria mechanical design institute at 614 Johnson was preceded only by a similar showroom in Vancouver.

Professional staff provide advice and assist in the pre paration of individual specifications for new work planned by houseisolders for all facets of installation, including plumbing fixtures, heating, lighting, wiring, floor and wall coverlings, color coordination, cabinets and accessories.

The opening, by B.C. Industry Minister Waldo Skillings, was attended by representatives of the mechanical contracting trades, suppliers, professions and government.

Russians Set Stage in Space For Dramatic 'Lab' Boarding

MOSCOW (Reuter)
Three cosmonauts joined Russia's unmanned space station in earth orbit today, setting the stage for a dramatic linkup and possibly a boarding that could set the pace for a second decade of Soviet space exploration.

Tass news agency said the three-man crew of Soyuz 10, launched early today, Moscow time, would carry out 'joint experiments' with the space station Salyut — Salute — sent into orbit Monday.

The space station is be-lieved to be one of the biggest space vehicles ever put into orbit and has completed more than 60 orbits of the earth.

The three men aboard Soyuz 10 are Cof. Vladimir Shatalov, flight engineer Alexel Yeliseyev—who both have been in space twice before—and test engineer Nikolal Rukavishnikov.

Nikolai Rukavishnikov.

The cosmonauts eased their Soyuz 10 into a parallel orbit with Salyut and zeroed in for a rendezvous. Soyuz 10 was in an orbit slightly higher than that of Salyut, but their angles of inclination to the equator were exactly the same, 51.6 degrees. This means that degrees. This means that Soyuz 10 would only have to slow down a bit to drop into the same orbit as Salyut.

Tass made no mention of an attempt to link the two craft apart from the reference to joint experiments, but Soviet scientists have said they want to see the introduccrews replaced every month

START PROGRAM

Tass said the Soyuz 10 cosmonauts a Irea dy had started their flight program but did not spell out what they were doing.

The agency said the pro-ram also included a series of ests to study the influence of space flight on human beings So far, no details of the station have been published, and its size and weight are matter of guesswork.

Tass said telemetric and scientific information from the unmapped Salyut craft was being processed, and all

U.S. MOVES

In Washington, the Pentagen a snounced increased aval and air surveillance in the area. Sources said the U.S. action is designed to ensure that nearby Cuba will not take advantage of any possible political turmoil in Haiti.

The Pentagon described its action as "a very modest increase in our normal activities in that part of the Caribbean" involving a few small ships and planes which were remaining in interest. were remaining in interna-tional waters and interna-tional air space.

The late president, a 64-year-old voodo-practising country doctor, died Wednes-day night and his death was announced Thursday. His body lay in state at the presidential palace as mourn-ers gathered for public viewing.

viewing.

Burial was set for Saturday. Palace sources said the funeral would be conducted under Roman Catholic rites.

Activity went on virtually in a normal fashion through the country. A 30-day period of mourning was decreed, flags flew at half mast and there appeared to be no unusual military activity.

Juan de Fuca Route Opposed

Premier Bennett said today if the United States insists on shipping Alaskan oil down the B.C. coast the tankers should stay out of the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

He said that the route should be kept "well out to sea" and the oil delivered to a more southerly point, such as California.

It could then be shipped from there to the refinery in Puget Sound — if necessary — by pipeline.

Bennett made his comments following a meeting with a federal Conservative leader Robert Stanfield who has just returned from Alaska.

The premier said the U.S. should stay out of waters close to the B.C. coast if it decides "in its wisdom" that it can't allow a pipeline through Canada to transport its own oil."

Bennett said he was "alarmed" about the prospect of huge oil tankers off the coast of B.C. and added that "we are vitally interested in protecting our environment."

He said B.C. would likely be involved "at the specialist" level in any Canada-U.S. talks about the proposed oil route.

Bennett said he and Stanfield had "a meeting of minds" on the question of protecting the environment of the west coast.

At issue is the construction of a pipeline across Alaska from the site of the huge North Slope oil reserves on the Arctic Ocean to the Port of Valdez on the Gulf of Alaska — a distance of 800 miles.

The oil would then be transported from Valdez by tanker to the Cherry Point refinery in Puget

At present the construction of the pipeline has been stalled by the U.S. department of the interior following an outcry by conservationists about the ecological effects of the scheme.

Canada has proposed an alternative pipeline route down the Mackenzie Walley, which would avert the danger of oil spills from wrecked tankers.

By STEVE HUME

On the proposition that great athletes are born and not made, 16-month-old Eric Duncan should be a long-distance track star when he grows up.

But he may not grow up if he keeps to the training schedule he set for himself Thursday.

Here's how the story emerges as the Times pieced it together from reports by the Pacific Rescue Centre.

Baby Duncan was out for a lazy afternoon of sunning with mum and dad on an isolated Galiano Island beach in the Coon Bay area. They relaxed while he gamboled among the driftwood and logs at low tide.

Once, just once, mum and dad looked the other way - and baby Duncan was off and running. All that driftwood made good cover, and while mum and dad searched fruitlessly, baby took advantage of the logs to pile on the mileage.

Mileage is the right word.

Baby Duncan claimed what must be a world distance record for toddlers. His jaunt carried him three-and-a-half miles north of the point where he went missing.

It is three-and-a-half miles from Mile 0 at the end of Douglas Street in Beacon Hill Park to the intersection of the Trans-Canada Highway and Tillicum Road in Saanich.

That wasn't the only impressive aspect of his performance.

He picked up what must be an endurance record of sorts—just kept crawling all night long. And although clad lightly in a jacket, shoes and diaper, baby Duncan was reported in fine condition and sent home when given the once-over by doctors at Chemainus hospital this morning.

He was also probably the youngest ever object of an integrated land, sea and air search, as well as being the first infant rescued by a hovercraft.

"The biggest demand for loans is for cars," says Ivan Bellefeuille, head of the personal loan department at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

"The weather has that effect on people. They start thinking about buying new cars and boats."

"The customers just don't come out but when spring comes, well then they start to come into the showrooms again."

Sales of Ford luxury cars had climbed about 25 per cent here this spring, compared with the 1970 period.

The buying surge was especially welcome to car dealers after two years of economic recession, labor problems and competition from the low-cost Japanese imports.

WHY BRITANNIA?

413 Feet, 255 Men To Cross the Gulf

I yield to no man, sir, as the saying goes, not even to that dedicated monarchist, J. Courtney Haddock, in my all but irrational sentimentality toward the Royal Family, doubtless a symptom of the incurable disease called Anglophilia.

That dutifully said, I must add that this business of the royal yacht Britannia demonstrates yet again the appalling bone-headedness of the public relations advice that so often seems a deliberate conspiracy to tarnish the image of the dear girl who occupies our throne.

If you ask, in the war-time question, "Is this trip necessary?" you can come up with all sorts of answers, all of them ending up as "No." Indeed, if ever there was a case of over-doing the ostentatious trappings of old-fashloned, outdated royalty in times that require the monarchy to develop the common touch this, surely, is it.

There she sits, hidden from the public eye, in the Esquimalt dockyard, all 413 gorgeous, royal-blue feet of her, all 5,000 tons, a gallant ship on a downright bloody frivolous

And there they sit, on their royal-blue butts, an $18,000-a-year rear-admiral, 20 officers, 27 chief petty officers, 26 petty officers, 172 leading and able seaman ranks, not to mention eight violinists, one violist, two cellists, one double bassist, two horn-players, a flautist, a clarinetist and an oboist, all half-way around the globe from their homes on a Mickey Mouse assignment.

Why did this beautiful tub sail some 8,000 nautical miles out of her way from the South Pacific Seas, turning north at the Panama Canal instead of paying her toll at the gate instead of paying her toll at the gate and sensibly heading for her harbour at Portsmouth?

at Portsmouth?

Why is she sitting here now, while her 255-men crew idly cool their heels, at an over-all cost reliably put at $40,000 a week?

The answer, dear friends, is that H.M. Yacht Britannia will be involved in two ferry-runs that could be be headed nicely by any 40-600t.

volved in two ferry-runs that could be handled nicely by any 40-foot cruiser loaned by a loyal member of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, that she will offer an air-conditioned apartment for Elizabeth, Philip and Anne for three or four nights and that she will provide the salon for a private dinner party. This needed 255 of a crew on a 413-foot sea-going vessel? This needed $40,000 a week of taxpayers' money? I mean, really, did Elizabeth honestly need this gorgeous great vessel to cross the straits of Georgia from Vancouver or to cover the 150-odd miles from Comox to Victoria? I mean, really, did Elizabeth honestly require Britannia's air-conditioned Royal apartment and the eight violinists, one violist, two cellists, one double bassist, two horn players, a flautist, a clarinetist and an oboist?

Couldn't we have just fixed them up with a nice,

Couldn't we have just fixed them up with a nice, adjoining suite in the old wing of The Empress and resurrected Billy Tickle's trio, or, for that matter, to do it big, Billy's Ten Tantalizing Toe-Ticklers, at union rates?

It's not just that this, great ship has come all the way here for a function that, as far as Victoria and Britannia are concerned, will last just three of the 10 days of the royal visit concerned, will last just three of the 10 days of the royal visit in early May, but that the only people who'll get a real look at her will be a few select members of the Establishment invited to dinner. Hell, even American submarines welcome the peasants aboard for a look around.

The space station is be-lieved to be one of the biggest space vehicles ever put into orbit and has completed more than 60 orbits of the earth.

The cosmonauts eased their soyuz 10 into a parallel orbit with Salyut and zeroed in for a rendezvous. Soyuz 10 was in an orbit slightly higher than Soyuz 10 would only have to slow down a bit to drop into the same orbit as Salyut.

Stanfield Sees Oil Plan Gaps

By DON VIPOND

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield said in Victoria today he sees two major gaps in devel-opment of American plans to ship oil out of Alaska.

There is a lack of research on water accidents. What would happen if the giant tankers which may be used down B.C.'s coast were involved in collisions or sprung leaks?

And there is an information gap, certainly as far as Canadians are concerned, on just what volume of tanker traffic is proposed.

NO ANSWERS

Stanfield said he tried with-out success to get some answers on the volume of traffic on the three-day visit to Alaska he has just com-

The Canadian government has a clear responsibility to follow the matter more closely, he said.

"There seems to be a great deal of unanswered questions about the tankers."

Stanfield, in Victoria while on a fact-finding tour of the west coast on the oil issue, made the comments this morning while exchanging views with eight environment specialists, called together at his request by Environment 100

Earlier in the morning he met with Premier Bennett for 25 minutes. Leaving the premier's office, he said it had been a pleasant meeting in which a number of questions were discussed. "We're all considerably concerned" a bout environment threats, he said.

Route Opposed Premier Bennett said today if the United States insists on shipping Alaskan oil down the B.C. coast the tankers should stay out of the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

He said that the route should be kept "well out to sea" and the oil delivered to a more southerly point, such as California.

It could then be shipped from there to the refinery in Puget Sound — if necessary — by pipeline.

Bennett made his comments following a meeting with a federal Conservative leader Robert Stanfield who has just returned from Alaska.

The premier said the U.S. should stay out of waters close to the B.C. coast if it decides "in its wisdom" that it can't allow a pipeline through Canada to transport its own oil.

Bennett said he was "alarmed" about the prospect of huge oil tankers off the coast of B.C. and added that "we are vitally interested in protecting our environment."

He said B.C. would likely be involved "at the specialist" level in any Canada-U.S. talks about the proposed oil route.

Bennett said he and Stanfield had "a meeting of minds" on the question of protecting the environment of the west coast.

At issue is the construction of a pipeline across Alaska from the site of the huge North Slope oil reserves on the Arctic Ocean to the Port of Valdez on the Gulf of Alaska — a distance of 800 miles.

The oil would then be transported from Valdez by tanker to the Cherry Point refinery in Puget Sound.

At present the construction of the pipeline has been stalled by the U.S. department of the interior following an outcry by conservationists about the ecological effects of the scheme.

Canada has proposed an alternative pipeline route down the Mackenzie Valley, which would avert the danger of oil spills from wrecked tankers.

Quebecers Win Key Tactic Vote

HOVERCRAFT FINDS BABY . . .

* * *

On the proposition that great athletes are born and not made, 16-month-old Eric Duncan should be a long-distance track star when he grows up.

But he may not grow up if he keeps to the training schedule he set for himself Thursday.

Here's how the story emerges as the Times pieced it together from reports by the Pacific Rescue Centre.

Baby Duncan was out for a lazy afternoon of sunning with mum and dad on an isolated Galjano Island beach in the Coon Bay area. They relaxed while he gamboled among the driftwood and logs at low tide.

Once, just once, mum and dad looked the other way - and baby Duncan was off and running. All that driftwood made good cover, and while mum and dad searched fruitlessly, baby took advantage of the logs to pile on the mileage.

Mileage is the right word.

* *

Baby Duncan claimed what must be a world distance record for toddlers. His jaunt carried him three-and-a-half miles north of the point where he went missing.

It is three-and-a-half miles from Mile 0 at the end of Douglas Street in Beacon Hill Park to the intersection of the Trans-Canada Highway and Tillicum Road in Saanich.

... MISSING ON GALIANO ISLAND

That wasn't the only impressive aspect of his performance.

He picked up what must be an endurance record of sorts—just kept crawling all night long. And although clad lightly in a jacket, shoes and diaper, baby Duncan was reported in fine condition and sent home when given the once-over by doctors at Chemainus hospital this morning.

He was also probably the youngest ever object of an integrated land, sea and air search, as well as being the first infant rescued by a hovercraft.

Optimistic Sewer Vote Will Pass

Ald. Ken Stanlake is opti-mistic about the $900,000 sewer referendum in Central sewer referendum in Central Saanich on Saturday.

Although two earlier referendums failed, Stanlake said today: "We are confident this time that we will gain a good majority. Many people who opposed previous schemes as being too large and expensive have pledged solid support for this one."

this one."

Response to advance polls held Thursday and today indicates a good turnout on Saturday.

A total of 935 electors is eligible to cast ballots in Brentwood, Saanichton and Turgoose Point, the districts to be served by the collection system.

No referendum is required to meet costs of the trunk line, treatment plant and 2,000foot outfall which are to be constructed by authority of the Capital Regional District. Polling stations will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday at the municipal hall and Brentwood Ele-

> Seafood Said Safe

Times News Services
VANCOUVER — Canad
seafood, despite the preser of an organism known to be responsible for food poisoning in Japan, was judged com-pletely safe Thursday by a fisheries department spokes man.

Don Wilson, chief of the federal fisheries inspection branch here said concentration of the organism, called vibrio parahaemolyitcus, in Canadian seafood is small. In any case, he added, waters here are too cold for it to become a problem.

He also stressed that the vibrio is not related to cholera. First news stories referred to it as a "cholera-like organism".

Percy Frampton introduced a motion asking council to deplore these reports, and state firmly that Elizabeth II is indeed the "Queen of Canada."

Aid. Peter Pollen said the motion presupposed a lnck of loyalty. Aid. Robert Baird and Aid. Harold Olafson agreed. Ald. Ove Witt, who had seconded Frampton's motion, retracted, just as Frampton got to his feet.

"Yes, that's what I was going to do," added Frampton, and council's loyalty to the Ouen was again secure.
